NUTRITION

School feeding program(s) include/involve the following:

- Fortified foods
- Bio-fortified foods
- Micronutrient supplements
- Nutritionists involved
- Special training for cooks/caterers in nutrition
- Objective to meet nutritional goals
- Objective to reduce obesity
- To meet educational goals

Food items fortified:

Oil, Salt

Micronutrients added to fortified foods:

Vitamin A, Iodine

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Handwashing with soap, and health education are mandatory activities as a national and program requirement. Obesity is not considered a problem in Sudan. Special training or certification programs were not required for cooks/caterers.

- Other groups

There was community engagement (by parents or others) in the school feeding program(s)

Yes No NR

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Cooks/caterers are paid in cash by local government; between 25 and 50% were women. Local companies were involved in food trading, food processing, transport, and in providing supplies for the programs. Women were encouraged to participate in the programs and to take leadership positions in the Parents and Teachers Associations and Schools' Friends. Community members were encouraged to volunteer to help with food preparation, supervision, and/or serving. Civil society helped by contributing whatever was lacking (e.g., fuel, food, water, spices).

SUCCESSES AND CHALLENGES

The country was affected by economic/financial crises and conflict emergencies in the most recently completed school year. Displacement in the Darfur states affected education in general and resulted in many displaced people in addition to economic hardship. This resulted in decreasing the number of students fed, frequency of school feeding, size of rations, level of food basket variety, and required changes in targeting approaches for school feeding programs. There are preparation measures in place related to school feeding for future emergencies through assessment and planning, in addition to increases in potential financial resources.

Successes: A Systems Approach for Better Education Results (SABER) workshop was conducted in 2016; development of an Action Plan/Road map; and an MoU was signed between the Government of Sudan and WFP on School Feeding.

Strengths: School feeding improved attendance, performance, and retention.

Setbacks: The political-will was very weak; there were no policies for school feeding; and there was limited funding for education in general.

Challenges: The inflationary prices affected the coverage for the school feeding; there are issues with data accuracy; it is difficult to monitor vast areas beset by hazards and risks; and access is difficult during the rainy season in some areas.

Corruption/Mismanagement: Inaccessibility of schools and lack of monitoring sometimes result in mismanagement.

NOTES:

This feeding program's core modality is provision of in-school meals where schools are targeted based on food security indicators. Additionally, a second modality offered by WFP – Sudan is a monthly distribution of take home rations given to girls who attended more than 80% of school days in areas where gender parity is high. It was reported that this second modality provided take home rations for approximately 6,000 primary-school-age girls during 2018/19.
